INTRODUCTION

The title of this report on human rights abuses in the frontier areas of Burma, "I Am Still Alive", comes from the account of a villager who survived forced labor, beatings and abuse as a porter for the Burmese Army. His story, included in this report, is typical of a pattern of abuses committed by the Burmese Army in the frontier areas. This report is composed of findings of a questionnaire survey undertaken in August, 1986. The intent of the survey was to obtain general information about the types of human rights abuses occurring in the frontier areas, and the scale on which they were happening during the period 1983-1986.

Historically, numerous ethnic groups, civilizations and tribes have coexisted in the land the map now shows as Burma. There was constant friction between these different groups, often leading to war. During the British colonial period, these conflicts did not cease, but were heightened by economic and political factors. When the Japanese invaded Burma during the Second World War, most Burmese supported the Japanese, while other ethnic groups (such as the Karen and Kachin) fought them, supporting the Allies. Independence was granted Burma after the Second World War, and the Burmese gained the upper hand in the new government. There was conflict between the Burmese in power and the non-Burmese ethnic groups. Rebel armies arose from the non-Burmese groups and from political factions such as the Communist Party.

Ever since Burma's Independence came in 1948, a war of attrition has been fought between the Burmese government and a variety of opposition forces. In 1962, a military strongman, General Ne Win, took over the government, and he has remained in power to this day. Ne Win instituted a system called "The Burmese Way of Socialism", which has been characterized by economic stagnation, isolationism, and abrogation of the rights guaranteed in Burma's Independence Constitution. Autonomy granted to non-Burmese frontier groups such as the Shan and Karen in the Constitution was denied. There was institutionalized discrimination against non-Burmese ethnic groups such as urban Chinese and Indians, and Arakanese Muslims. Organized political dissent was outlawed, and the press was heavily censored. It has been estimated that Burma has had some 8,000 political prisoners since 1962. Political prisoners and insurgents have been tortured.
As the insurgents' war against the Burmese government continues, there are thousands of casualties each year in the frontier areas. Burmese military abuse of civilians arises from the frustrations of their presence in the hostile frontier areas, and the need to control the non-Burmese population by any means available. These abuses give the rebel groups a motivation to continue fighting, to protect the non-Burmese population against the military occupation forces. The rebel groups have been guilty of human rights abuses, themselves. However, these abuses have been limited by the rebels' dependence on the good will of the frontier people, and in most instance by their genuine regard for the frontier peoples' welfare. Human rights abuses by the Burmese government and military occur on a much greater scale, and appear to take an institutionalized form as campaigns of terror in the border areas. Therefore, this report deals with abuses committed by the Burmese government and military, and uses rebel group members as information sources.

Most of the human rights abuses recounted in the survey are Burmese military abuses of civilians: forced labor, sexual abuse, torture, theft, and destruction of property. Throughout this long war, the Burmese military has showed severe disregard for the safety of non-combatants in the frontier areas. Perception of the non-Burmese people as inferior and primitive may account for this type of abuse, as may the examples of cruelty in warfare set by ancient Burmese kings and Japanese occupation forces. A new and significant development, not mentioned in the survey, has been the Burmese government's use of 2,4-D herbicide and spraying aircraft (donated by a U.S. anti-narcotics program) in a way that endangers hill tribe people in the north of Burma. The Burmese have attempted a "strategic hamlet" strategy, confining villages suspected of insurgent support to guarded camps, and this also accounts for abuse of civilians.

Burma's isolation and neutrality have served to conceal the pattern of human rights abuse from the scrutiny of the rest of the world. Journalists and other investigators are barred from Burma. There has been very little reporting on human rights abuses in Burma, and so the pattern continues. This report is not a detailed investigation of human rights abuses. It is simply an alert to the fact that there is a widespread and serious pattern of abuse in Burma. This report serves as an alarm bell to show rights investigators where to look for more information, and what types of abuse should be protested.

"I am still alive" is like the cry for help of a miner trapped in a cave-in. You might not have known that the miner was still alive in there, in mortal danger, before he cried out -- but once you have heard his cry for help, you must try to rescue him. Very few people in the outside world are aware of the plight of the frontier people of Burma, but once you read their accounts, you must try to help them survive.

Purpose, Scope and Method

This human rights survey was a qualitative research study, seeking to obtain information on human rights abuses in the frontier areas of Burma which occurred during the period 1983-1986. The questionnaire covered the following types of human rights abuse:

1. Military abuse: using civilians for forced labor, taking civilians hostage or purposely endangering lives of civilians, committing criminal acts against civilians (non-combatants).

2. Imprisonment: imprisoning someone without charges, or without trial; imprisoning someone for non-violent expression of political beliefs, or because of their ethnic identity; torturing prisoners.

3. Civil Rights: denying rights or benefits (such as education, health care, representation, trade) because of ethnic group or religion; suppressing religious practices, cultural expression, language.

A copy of the instructions provided with the questionnaire can be found at the end of this report. The survey was two pages, plus a page of instructions. The survey was mailed out in late July, 1986, with instructions to return the completed surveys by September, 1986, for inclusion in this report. Survey information received after the deadline for this report will be distributed separately.

About thirtyfive questionnaires were sent out. About twenty were questionnaires for "opposition members" -- people involved in the insurgency against the Burmese government. About fifteen were sent to observers -- journalists, Western academics, etc., with knowledge about the insurgency. Less than one third of the surveys were returned in time to be included in this report. Two factors account for the fairly low rate of return: 1. bad weather, transport difficulties, etc., in the war zone on the Burma/Thailand border. 2. Most of the "observers" declined to respond, stating that their information would be too "second hand" to be useful.

The lack of width of the survey sample was made up for by the depth of the replies. The respondents provided detailed accounts of events, with names, places, and statistics. The questions about military abuse were most often answered, in great detail. The questions about civil rights were least answered, as many respondents considered that a political or philosophical question, and not confined to the period 1983-1986.
The questionnaires for "observers" and "participants" were exactly the same, except for personal information at the beginning. "Observers" were asked for "capacity in which you observe the Burma political situation/insurgency", and for "nationality". "Participants" ("Opposition members") were asked for "Military rank or government position if any" and "member of which organization opposed to Burmese Government, if any", as well as "place of birth" and "ethnic group". Since the questionnaires were interchangeable, some respondents who might be classified as participants used observer questionnaires.

Many of the respondents did not fill out the questionnaires, but sent other forms of material in response to the survey. Some very detailed reports were sent instead of, or as supplements to, the questionnaires themselves. In some cases, respondents went out and interviewed victims or witnesses of abuse. In other cases, respondents provided records of human rights abuse that had been compiled by various opposition organizations.

All of the questionnaires and supplementary material received by the report deadline are reproduced in this report. They are reproduced exactly as received, except in a few cases where personal information is deleted. The questionnaires all were sent to people who are fluent in English (usually as a second or third language). Among ethnic groups represented were the Karen, Shan, Karenni and Kachin.
Summary of Findings

A brief summary of each survey response follows. The survey responses are reproduced in their entirety at the end of this report.

4. Abel Tweed (Kayah, Karenni Resistance Government): Civilian forced labor, 600 used as porters by Burmese regiments. 60 porters were tortured, killed, missing. Person taken hostage, tortured, held for ransom, by Burmese regiment. Two civilians killed by Burmese regiment. Civilian killed by Burmese regiment. Civilian raped and killed; civilian tortured and killed by Burmese regiment. Three persons imprisoned for three years without charges or trial. Three persons captured, tortured, beaten; one of whom died. Unqualified teachers sent to Kayah State. Missionary clergy expelled and missionary schools nationalized by Burmese.

8. Philippa Curwen (British): Children forced to carry water for Burmese soldiers. Villagers forced to work as porters, forced to wear uniforms and walk in front of Burmese troops "as cannon-fodder". Villager beaten and imprisoned for refusal to work as porter, then ransomed. Villagers who refused to be porters beaten. Shan referred to University because of ethnic identity. Students forbidden to speak Shan. Person arrested for teaching Shan script. Report from Tailland Revolutionary Council: Shan monk arrested by Burmese troops, tortured, beaten, property seized (still in detention). Villagers forced to work as porters, village girls sexually abused and beaten. Shan monk arrested and tortured, said to have escaped but still missing. Villager tortured. Villages burned with mortars, property confiscated. Soldiers took money and chickens at villages. One villager killed, one villager wounded. Village headman's house looted and burned, ten children taken from village. Village rice crop and houses burned, villagers beaten. Soldiers burned houses, beat villagers. Porter, village headman, and villagers beaten. Property and money taken from villagers. Thirty four villagers beaten. Property confiscated from a villager.

Capacity in which you observe the Burma political situation/insurgency:

Do you know of any times during the past three years (1983-1986) when the Burmese government or military forces have committed any of the following abuses? If so, please specify when and where it happened, and who was involved.

1. Military abuses:
   a) Using civilians for forced labor
      Peasants of the Burmese Army are all forced laborers. Before 1970, peasants were given 2 kyats and a few pyas per day. Now no money is given; and sometimes work or sick laborers are left or beaten or killed.

   b) Taking civilian hostages, or purposely endangering lives of civilians
      When villagers of many villages did not have enough paddy for consumption, and unable to sell to the government at the rate and amount fixed by the government, village elders and women folk were held as hostages until the conditions of the government were fulfilled at the expenses of the villagers. This sort of action took place sometime from 1975 up to now in the Karen State in Kya-in Township.

   c) Committing criminal acts against civilians (non-combatants)
      During the rainy season of 1985, 9 laborers of the mine between Maeka-Jat and Three Pagoa Pass villages were shot dead by the Burmese Army soldiers.
      On and around June 20th, 1986, two villages (Aizin and Mae-Jat - Indian village of Karen State, Kantaolei) were burnt down. One woman and two men were killed. Another man escaped by fighting a soldier, and still another man escaped with a slight cut on his neck.
2. Imprisonment:
   a) Imprisoning someone without charges, or without trial

   b) Imprisoning someone for non-violent expression of political beliefs, or because of their ethnic identity

   c) Torturing prisoners

3. Civil Rights:
   a) Denying rights or benefits (such as education, health care, representation, trade) because of ethnic group or religion

      No private school is allowed to be opened and no ethnic language is taught in government school in Burma. So ethnic languages are gradually fading.

   b) Suppressing religious practices, cultural expression, language

      In 1985, during the rainy season, Bible school teachers and students of Kyauk village, Karen State, were made to carry things for the army. But we never heard of Buddhist monks and pupils being made to serve the army as porters.

1. Military abuses:
   a) Using civilians for forced labor

      One pastor of a Christian church in Ta-Mee-Let, village, Karen state, was forced to be a guide to lead the Burmese troops to Kyarkdon, in the rainy season of 1985, was about to be killed; but he managed to escape with his life.

   b) Taking civilian hostages, or purposely endangering lives of civilians

   c) Committing criminal acts against civilians (non-combatants)

   One Karen, male, named Puing Kyaw, age about 30, married, with a sick pregnant wife, a poor hill-side cultivator, office of Kyaw De Wai village in Pa Law town-ship, Mergui district, was shot dead in his house without any question by a soldier under the command of Bo Myo Lwin who then had about fifty soldiers with him; sometime in February, 1986. Bo Myo Lwin and his soldiers were posted in Pa Law town, Mergui district, to look after the whole township of Pa Law.

   One Karen, male, named Pyu Po, a village headman of Kep Kee, Karen village, age over 50 years, was ordered by Bo Myo Lwin to meet him in Kyaw De Wai village, where he came up with twenty soldiers. Headman Pyu Po went accordingly to meet him, accompanied by a villager, a Karen, age about 20 or 30. He was asked about Karen insurgents. He said Bo Myo Lwin that he had no news for him. Both Pyu Po and his fellow were taken to Na Dangau, a big village, and killed. Pyu Po had his neck cut, and his fellow's eyes gouged out. This took place during the cold season in 1985.

   One day, in the month of August, 1984, Bo Myo Lwin went to a Karen village, KA-WEER (a silent), with about forty soldiers. The village is in the township of Pa Law in Mergui district. There he met seven Karen villagers. He asked one of them named Maung Ya Shin about Karen insurgents. He replied he did not know. The others also replied the same. All seven were shot dead on the spot.
2. Imprisonment:
   a) Imprisoning someone without charges, or without trial

   b) Imprisoning someone for non-violent expression of political beliefs, or because of their ethnic identity

   c) Torturing prisoners

3. Civil Rights:
   a) Denying rights or benefits (such as education, health care, representation, trade) because of ethnic group or religion

      Almost all members of the Executive Committee of the Central Government are either military officers or retired military officers; hence it is a military government under a military dictator. National States Government in Burma are only in name. Actually, it is the nominee of the Central Government who rules the State.

   b) Suppressing religious practices, cultural expression, language

      The language used in the State Government is Burmese, and the ethnic languages disappear gradually.

In Mohn Yin Town, on February 25, 1978, the Burmese Army 38th Regiment arrested Sgt. Jun Aung, 6th Battalion Regimental Quarter Master Sgt. They dragged him along on their operational journey. He was done to death after slicing him bit by bit.

AT SHA TUM PLANE DA NAI TOWNSHIP, HUKAWNG DISTRICT:

On 20th March, 1979, a patrol party of platoon strength of the 86th Burma Regiment, Da Nai town, proceeded to Sha Tum Plane, arrested Capt. Kum Ba Bawk Naw (retd. KIA), a Murrh hunter possessing millions of Kyats besides first quality murrh, was robbed of his possessions. Then, he was tied to a tree, his eyes were plucked off before finally salting him to death.

Martyred Reverend Zin Chawng Tu Nan:

Because of a traitor, Capt. Labya Tang Gun, a KIO CC Member's whereabouts became known to the despotic Burmans. Rev. Tu Nan was arrested by the Burmans and took him to the Mandalay Fort for interrogation. During interrogation, the Burmans tied him upside down, lashed him round and round, rang him with telephone sets, kicked him with their boots, submerged him inside pond water. After such inhuman tortures, they then sent him to the Mandalay Civil Hospital. However, due to fatal injuries, he met his death.

Tortures to Death:

On July, 1979, Maj. Kolay Gyi of 37th Burma Regiment, Tang Hpre Town, arrested Mr. La Chyung gam, a Murrh hunter. The barbarous Major made the victim tied. Then, the victim's ears were cut off and roasted them and forced him to eat his own ears. Afterwards, the victim was sliced bit by bit and mixture of salt and pepper were then rubbed into his bleeding body. Just before the victim died he was stuffed into a gunny bag and was thrown into the river Mali Hka.

This same Major, in the same unit, at the same town, on November 11, 1981, arrested Mr. Lang Na Lai, Pan Lawaung Yang Village, N Raw Kawng Township, Sum Pra Bun District, burned the victim alive to death.

On November 14, 1983, another victim of this Major, Mr. N Lam Sut and Shing Rai Zaw Ra, Sata Pu Town, Myitkyina Township, were smoked to death over the Camp Fire.

contd...3
On January 10, 1982, this Major arrested Mr. La Nawng Saw Naw, Myitkyina Town, Mr. Hting nan Naw, N Jip village, and Mr. La Htaw Awng, Myitkyina Town, and tortured them to death after pulling out their eyes and slicing them.

On January 15, 1982, the same Major repeated his barbarous crime by burning alive Mr. Dam Lum, Mr. Hkong Lum, and Mr. Hkawng Ze of Wof Paw. On April 3, 1982 Mr. Tang Gam and Mr. Tang Tu of N Jang Township were arrested by the same Major. All of them were done to death after being sliced. To cover up this extraordinarily inhuman torture to death and massacres, all the victims' corpses were thrown into the river Mali Hka.

What is more, this terrorist Maj. Ko lay Gyi raped hundreds of Shan and Kachin girls whomsoever he chose when he was posted at KAI THIK POST taking advantage of its location on the main road of the Nam Hkan-Bha No cities where thousands of travellers move to and fro.

RAPING TO DEATH:

On December 29, 1974, the 46th Burmese Army Regiment sneaked into the Yang Bum Track, Shi Yang Bum village, Moh Nyin District. The Burmese arrested Mxx Ma Rip Hkawn (aged 29) and La Hpail Ja nan (aged 15). These Burmese soldiers raped them to death.

BURMESE COMMANDO RAID ON THE 253 UNIT, JAPU TOWN ON THE INTERNATIONAL HIGHWAY:

On December 12, 1984, that terror creator Burmese Commandos, a hundred strong, commanded by Maj. Kyaw Win of the 29th Burmese Regiment launched an attack on the KIA Post at Japu Town, eastern province. The battle began at 2:30 a.m. With God on the side of the Kachins, the enemy attack broke down at 9:30 a.m. and the Burmese troops disintegrated and ran away. The KIA captured 17 automatic rifles, 1 26 one 2" Mortar, one wireless set, and took 16 prisoners of war. The KIA, on the other hand, sacrificed two soldiers. All the prisoners were treated very well, given medical treatment, and then set free. But these mercenaries arrested two peasants Pa Lai La and La si Tu. La si Tu managed to escape with some bullet injuries through his leg and thigh. Unfortunately, Pa Lai La could not escape and was beaten to death. The terror creator Burmese soldiers also looted, snatched money, chickens, clothings and rations from the public that happened to be on their way back. The looted properties amounted to about five hundred thousand Kyats. Such untold tortures and massacres could number more than thousands.

For such extraordinarily inhuman tortures to death and massacres unleashed by the terrorized Burmese troops, the untold sufferings of the people of Kachinland is termed as follows: — emerged during the long hours of interviews, taping, picture-taking, and later of transcribing twenty-four pages of personal testimonies of Karens. At Clo Thay Lu, one of the Karen refugee camps, a villager, Saw Dee Phaw, told me of his experience. He had been forced to carry ammunition and supplies for the Burman army. At times when not carrying for them, his arms were tied behind him in two or three places. They did not give him enough food or water. The Burmans burned all their rice farms. (Rice is the staple diet of people in the Far East.)

The Burmans sold the prisoners about eight tins of rice.

(One tin equalled about the size of a 4 oz. condensed milk can.)

When the Burman troops came to the village, they forced all of the Karens out of their houses and looted them of all they had, including their salt. They divided the villagers into four groups. The first group, mostly women and children, were given rakes and forced down the road at gun point to rake it clear of mines. The second group dragged a large log with spikes in it to bite into the dirt to explode mines. The third group drove ox carts. The wheels of one ox cart close to him caught on a mine and blew up the driver, the oxen, and the cart. The fourth group consisted of ox carts with provisions for the Burman troops.

This was repeated to me, in differing words, time and again: Forced labor, no compensation, inadequate food and water, and death if one lagged or fell, death if one succeeded in exploding the mines, and death frequently administered for no apparent reason.
At Cio Thay Lu refugee camp, Ma Ngwe Hla said her husband was returning to the village when Burman troops seized him. They shot him in the leg and in the head. She did not see it happen, but saw her husband’s body.

The most detailed and exact account was given me by T. L.; I cannot use his real name, as his family is still in a Burman concentration camp. He said that in the concentration camps, which they had been forced to build, the people had to feed themselves as best they could. They had to carry ammunition and food for the Burmans. Women and children were allowed out of the camp to gather food. He reported that a rich Karen, Tha Palo, who owned a sugar cane farm was beaten and robbed of 40,000 bahts (about $27 to U.S. $1). Tha Palo did not have to work — he could buy his way free from work. There were about 200 families in his concentration camp, approximately 500 people. North of Pa-an, there were more than 100 camps, with more than 10,000 Karens. His was a smaller camp. He reported numerous beatings with a bamboo cane about 5 cm thick (more like a club size). They nearly broke the legs of one man. Even the Karen doctor was confined to the camp.

Men and women were tortured to reveal the whereabouts of Karen soldiers, even when there were no Karen soldiers close by.

Naw Kho Mey, a female in Ma Ta Wah refugee camp, reported that the whole of Hlaing Bwe township of Pa-an District was deserted, all the villages destroyed, and about 2,000 square miles of farm land burned out.
The Burman troops had no respect for religion — even that of Buddhism, the religion of ninety per cent of the Burmans. At Shw Klo refugee camp, this became apparent when I talked with two refugees, one a Muslim, and the other a Buddhist priest. Saw Kyaw Kyaw, an Indian Muslim, reported that his religious leader, an Inman, was beaten to the ground. His cap fell off and the Burman soldiers stepped on it. He also reported that as the Burman troops were attacking Maw Po Khe, they forced both men and women porters to carry ammunition up into the front lines to resupply the troops. He said that since he, a Muslim lived with the Karens, the Burmans said he sympathized with them and so he was treated as a Karen.

The Buddhist monk, U We Ma La, reported that when the Burman troops took over his Karen village, they camped within the monastery walls, tore up some of the flooring for firewood, stole about forty woven bamboo mats (the equivalent to rugs), and defaced the property. When he reported this to his superiors, as he had been told to do if such harassment should occur, nothing was done to stop the troops. He was told to reorganize the village administration, but the Karen villagers told him it was not the job of a monk to do this — as indeed it isn’t, according to Buddhist scriptures. When his Karen villagers left, he left with them. Other monks from other villages had the same experiences, as he knew of one in Thailand who had this same thing happen to him.

I began to wonder at the extent of the problem. How many were in the refugee camps? How were they being cared for?

Above all, why hadn't this story been told?

My translator was Saw Shwe Ya Hlai, Kauthoolie Minister of education, and my tape recorder operator was Saw Paul, son-in-law of Saw Hla Htoo. Between them they told me of trying to publicize these atrocities, and that a representative from Amnesty International had even visited the refugee camps. Reports were made to Thra Robert Htwe, chairman of the Karen Refugee Committee, who told others, but no nation, no person, no organization - not even the United Nations - took note.

The only aid came from private humanitarian groups which furnished rice and medical help, and private individuals who provided the land, at a price, for the camps' locations.

When I reached Mae Sot, I made it a point to locate Thra Robert Htwe to get the facts. He provided me with the annual Karen Refugee Report for 1985, which showed that as of December, 1985, 9,502 persons were in the camps. By the end of April, 1986, four months later, the figure had risen to 17,062. When I got back home he sent me the May, 1986, report showing 17,337 in the camps. He indicated that he was in the process of trying to find land for another camp immediately, and would probably need another site by the end of 1986 if the rate continued.

I asked him what would happen if the Burmans were able to launch a monsoon campaign. Normally, the monsoons were only a few weeks away; actually, only a few days away, as the monsoons came early in 1986. He shook his head - he had no answer.

(Burma) Reports ON Burmese Soldiers Cruelty.

Following testimonies are taken in the presence of a Canadian free-lance, Mr. Hall.

He visited Karenni on 12-4-86 as the Burmese soldiers withdraw. He took pictures of all the porters who gave testimonies as below.

Picture at the bottom of this report is Mr. Hall watching medication given to one porter (badly blistered shoulder and cut feet) who was picked by Karenni fighting patrol after he had been left to die in the jungles. He was without food and water for 6 days. He was not only famished, starved but dehydrated.

Name:    Maw Kolo,
Age:    21 years,
Nationality: Kayaw-(Bre)
Parents' Name: Paeh Theh Ei, Baw Go,
Religion: Catholic,
Occupation: Farmer,
Address:    6 mile, Model village, Loikaw.

STATEMENT:-

On April 10, 1986 the Burmese soldiers from 72 Burm Regiment, entered our village and rounded up all male persons, put us on the truck and drove us to Bawleke (60 miles south of Loikaw). We were made to carry more than 200 lbs (over 30 kilos). Between Bawleke and Salween river, 3 porters who became very weak and sick were shot dead by the Burmese soldiers in our presence threatening us not to fall out. When we had crossed Salween river one Burmese officer (Lt.) and one Sgt. were so tied and exhausted in the hot sun, they committed suicide. We, the porters were abused, kicked if we could not keep up with the Burmese soldiers. We did not get any wages and also not enough food. Then on the third day I fell sick badly, and was left alone in jungles under the hot sun. No food or water was left for me. After two days, Karenni soldiers found me and carried me to Hgs, where I get well being fed and treated.

Age: 18 Years.
Nationality: Kayan (Padaung)
Parents' Name: Kalit-Moo Moh Doo
Religion: Catholic
Occupation: Farmer
Address: Tsa Tuh village, Taungoo-Yadok-Loikaw Road.

STATEMENT:
Village Council Chairman Tha Shwe said military authority demanded 20 villagers to report to Bur. Regt. 72 at Lawpita. When we arrived we were given big guns ammunitions to carry on our shoulders. With these heavy loads we had to climb up steep hills and go down rocky slopes. Crossed rivers over boulders. My feet badly blistered and both shoulders bursted open, then one day I fainted-unconscious how long I did not know, only recovered and found I was being carried by the Karenni soldiers to the Hq's. Had the Karenni soldiers not found me I would have died in the jungles.

Name: Maung Thein
Age: 30 Yrs. with (4) childrens.
Nationality: Indian
Parents' Name: Risa Sa Ri-Aye Sein
Religion: Islam
Address: Daw Go Kuh Quarters, Loikaw.

STATEMENT:
One day a party unit chairman, U Arther, came to my house and took me to the Burma Army 54 Regt. Hq's. I was kept there for 3 days then sent me to Dawleke along with Burmese soldiers. I was to carry 2 tins of rice together with some ammunitions which is over 29 viss. I was very sick on the way and was left in the jungle without food or water. The Karenni soldiers who were fighting the Burmese found and took me to safety getting food and water. All the journey we were abused and kicked if we did not keep up with the soldiers.

STATEMENT:

One midnight, the Burmese soldiers of Regt. 54 surrounded our village and seized (50) villagers and took us to Loikaw. The next day we were taken to Bawleke where we were forced to carry rice and all kinds of ammunitions. I was to carry 2 tins of rice and some ammunitions about 25 viss heavy. We were not paid and they fed us very little. We crossed rocky mountains in the sun, hungry and thirsty also. We all are tired very much, besides my shoulders blistered and feet soared with blood. The soldiers kicked us and blood comes out. I was boxed at my side many times and very painful. One of my friends was beaten to death in front of me. When we passed any village they burnt all houses and paddy barns. All villagers fled or they will be killed. I managed to hide under a bush and stayed there for 6 days until the Karenni soldiers found me and carry me to Hgs. where I was treated. I am still alive.
HUMAN RIGHTS COMMITTEE for Non-Burman Nationalities

Testimony of the Burmese Atrocity

On December 10, 1985, we tried to dodge the Burmese army when we knew that they were approaching our villages. On reaching our villages, they burned and destroyed everything they found in the village.

After a few days when things quiet down, I went back along with three women to check our property.

On approaching the village, we were caught by the Burmese soldiers. At first, they were going to kill us. But later, we were spared because they needed porters. The three women had to carry two tins of rice each. At night, we often tripped and fell.

Naw Bweh, wife of pastor Saw Di suffered very badly when she had miscarriage.

When I saw a note that they had order to kill us immediately if the Karens put up a fight against them I made up my mind to escape. On December 20, I managed to escape.

All of us from Lenya area (ie. Ler Pa Doe, Manoro) were so frightened that we ran when ever we heard gun shots. Several days passed and we realized that we will soon be without food if we hang around there. So, we marched to the Thai border. We reached one Thai village on December 28, 1985. We were grateful because the Thais are kind enough to donate some clothing to cover ourselves. On January 18, we were evacuated to Mo Taung Pass where we are now clearing some areas preparing for slash and burn rice plantation. We expect to harvest sometime around December this year.

In the mean time, we have much to worry how we could survive this eleven months.

The following reliable news are collected by me at 4 P.M. to-day.

This is the statement of Tun Kyi, a Karen, of NEE PAYA VILLAGE, of WO TIEN TOWN. "I was the headman of the above named village. On 16-8-56. The 62nd and 21st Battalion of the Burmese Army from Myitkyina and Thanbyuzaya, respectively entered our village. There was no enemy in the village. They ordered us to assemble in the middle of the village. I managed to escape with a few villagers. Some of them guarded the villagers, while the rest ransacked all the houses, they took away everything they could not carry. Their strength was about 200 soldiers, and about 200 porters. They killed domestic animals for their meals, and took them all away, loaded in 8 village bullock carts. The enemy enquired about me as soon as they entered the village. They stayed in the village for a day and night. At 11 a.m. they paraded the surrounding area. A John of about 15 and his 3-year-old sister, hearing their cattle in the field were caught. The father and his wife were in the rice paddy and slept on the field. The villagers later found them. The little sister was crying helplessly near her brother. The victim was taken to the hospital in a rather emaciated condition due to loss of too much blood. The victim was 16 years old. When the enemy entered the village, some villagers ran away, afraid to become the porters. One man named NING NING was killed when the enemy opened fire at the fleeing villagers. When the enemy left, I came back from a toil of bringing my wife and 3 children back. I arranged with some village elders to go to negociate with the army officers. A Civil Officer managed to get back my wife and children, but not before paying a ransom of 5000 kyats. (Five thousand kyats). I have lost everything. I have left the village. I am now at HEO PAYA, a village in the deep jungle. Some refugees have come to my village and some shifted to other villages.

About 80 had arrived at 4 P.M. and many more are coming. Life in Burma is no more bearable."

A man told me that about the beginning of the month of May, the 32nd Battalion of the Burmese Army took about 150 strong, together with 100 porters, entered NEE PAYA village. They did not see any enemy and there was no resistance in any way. They deliberately burnt down about 10 rice villages. Paddy barns, that contained more than 2000 baskets of paddy, were totally destroyed. About 200 baskets of rice and 300 bogs of sesame oil were taken away by the village burmese carts. Their reasons of excuse is that the villagers are supplying the rebels with rice and paddy.
I was told that you had already received the following in ciphers:

About the middle of July, 1919, a party of 700 Kurem soldiers of the 27th Battalion from Mafiri, landed at a point on the east coast of the Mozambique Channel and advanced towards the town of Matree. They were about 400 yards from the village when they saw the soldiers and horses of the 27th Battalion. They fired on them and were immediately killed. The village was completely destroyed. The soldiers then advanced and captured the town, killing all the inhabitants. The village was burned to the ground.

On the night of 18th August 1919, a company of 31st Battalion from Mafiri marched into Vito village and destroyed about 300 huts.

On the 5th of November 1919, a party of 700 Kurem soldiers of the 27th Battalion from Mafiri arrived at the village and burned down about 300 huts.

On the beginning of the month of November 1919, a peasant, named Tshimbo, was deported and arrested by the Kurem soldiers.

On the 10th of November 1919, a party of 700 Kurem soldiers of the 27th Battalion from Mafiri burned down the village of Vito.

Capacity in which you observe the Burma political situation/insurgency:

Base on how "social-injustice" could be terminated

1. Military abusers:
   a) Using civilians for forced labor

   It is an established fact that Burma Army have been doing this since the beginning of civil war, particularly in all the minorities’ areas. Although no area survey and statistic have ever been done, it would be enough to look through reports done by Far Eastern Economic Review, Asia Week and Daily Newspapers (Thailand)

   b) Taking civilian hostages, or purposely endangering lives of civilians

   The same answer could be given as 1. a).

   c) Committing criminal acts against civilians (non-combatants)

   Please see separate sheet.

   On 26.9.85, a group of soldiers from Burma Army 55 division abucted "Nang Kyek", 15 years, 4 class student, daughter of Mr. Sena and Mrs. Nang Non (Nam Ko Lam Village, Nam Sang Township), and sexually mistreated her until she fainted. Apart from that, the soldiers confiscated various goods and Kyats 3000 from the villagers.

Capacity in which you observe the Burma political situation/insurgency:

As a fellow human-being.

1. Military abuses:
   a) Using civilians for forced labor
      A Shan monk from Leng Kho, now staying in Mae Hong Son, told how children from his village aged 13-14 were being forced to become water-carriers for BSPP soldiers. (last year)

   b) Taking civilian hostages, or purposely endangering lives of civilians
      The Shan Abbot of Bang Moo temple in Mae Hong Son visited Hong Tun in the eastern Shan State last year. He told how villagers, both men and women, who had been forced to work as porters, were made to wear army uniforms and walk in front of BSPP soldiers to act as cannon-fodder.

c) Committing criminal acts against civilians (non-combatants)
2. Imprisonment:
   a) Imprisoning someone without charges, or without trial

   Last year Chai Lang, aged 23, a farmer from Hong Hai (in the Shan State) who was working in Mae Hong Son, told how he had been ordered to become a porter for E.S.P soldiers. He refused and was beaten with sticks and put in prison, where he stayed for a week, till a friend bribed some officials to get him out.

   b) Imprisoning someone for non-violent expression of political beliefs, or because of their ethnic identity

   c) Torturing prisoners

   The Abbot of Bang Noo told how villagers from Hong Tun who had refused to become porters were beaten with sticks.

3. Civil Rights:

   a) Denying rights or benefits (such as education, health care, representation, trade) because of ethnic group or religion

   The Abbot of Bang Noo said that on a visit to Tachilek (eastern Shan State) last year, he had met young Shan who claimed to have been refused admittance to University because of being Shan.

   b) Suppressing religious practices, cultural expression, language

   The Shan monk from Lang Seh told how when he had been at school, 2 years ago, he had been forbidden to speak Shan. Students who were caught speaking Shan at school were fined.

   The Abbot of Bang Noo said that a friend of his had been arrested last year for teaching the Shan script in Hong Hai (southern Shan State).

MAIL THIS SURVEY TO: PROJECT MAJE, 14 DARTMOUTH RD., CRANFORD, N.J. 07016, U.S.A. (AIRMAIL)
2nd January 1984 - BSPP troops from Lashio arrived at the monastery in Mong Kong and arrested the Shan monk U Nantiya, accusing him of being a supporter of the Shan rebels. He was tied up to a bed and then beaten and tortured till bloody. Property and money amounting to 100,000 kyats was confiscated from him. He was then bound hand and foot and thrown into the back of a truck; soldiers rested their feet on him as he was driven away. He is still being detained, and rumour has it that he is being beaten regularly.

December 1984 - The 3rd Section of Brigade no. 2, led by Capt. Kyaw Say Ye came and collected porters from the villages of Mong Nawng, Nan Nor, Ban Sang. They also arrested 12 girls, aged 14 upwards, accusing them of being the wives of revolutionaries. The girls were forced to strip and then stand and sit in front of the soldiers; those who refused were beaten with sticks.

13th December 1984 - Capt. Than Aung of the no. 2 Intelligence group from Lashio came to the Nawng Ngen quarter of Kengtung and arrested the monk U Suwen, aged 23, son of U Ho Lo, accusing him of aiding rebels to seek funds. He was put in a dark room and tortured in various ways. On 16th December the news was put out that he had escaped, but there has been no sign of him since.

16th February 1985 - Sections 3 and 4 of Brigade no. 68 of BSPP Army arrived in Nan village, Lashio district, and arrested Sai Sin Kyaw, accusing him of possessing two weapons. He was tortured using a red-hot iron rod; he passed out four times and his flesh began to rot and smell. It is not sure if he is still alive.

21st February 1985 - BSPP troops fired at Nawng Lay and Na Nan villages using 57 mm mortars. Houses were destroyed, and the following property was confiscated:

September 6th 1985 - BSPP Captain Htin Maung and 40 of his men from Battalion were travelling from Long Kho to Chiang Taung when they confiscated a bullock cart from a villager, allegedly to carry their goods. However, when the soldiers passed east out from the village of Kwan Long, they dumped the cart and cooked and ate the cows.
In Burma there is no freedom of the press, no freedom of speech, no freedom of trade, no freedom to travel. We are like a nation of deaf, blind and dumb people, deprived even of news from within Burma itself - the newspapers are strictly censored, and the people are swamped in a sea of conflicting rumours.

The backbone of the Burmese military government is the Military Intelligence Service. Civil judges have no right to charge military personnel, who are unrestricted in their acts of cruelty and wickedness. They enjoy privileges far beyond those of the ordinary civilians, including special medical care and cut-price goods. This is in accordance with the government's policy to create a gulf between the army-men and the ordinary people. Most of the population live in terror of the NIS, notorious for their ruthless torturings and killings. Secret prisons exist around the country, often in military bases, where people may be detained indefinitely.

The government hires agents to monitor the activities of all sections of the civilian community, so that people must constantly be on their guard in daily life. Since most of the population are forced to risk dealing in smuggled black-market goods, simply to provide themselves with basic commodities, there are few people who do not feel they are living their life under a hanging sword.

For many years the people of Burma have struggled to free themselves from this oppression - at least 30% of the country is now under insurgent control - but sadly no political group has yet been successful in leading them to freedom.

The ex-premier U Nu led a resistance movement for a short period, but in 1980, discouraged by lack of success, he surrendered to the military government. The Communist Party of Burma, operating in the north of the country, has been unable to gain popular support, and has lost the backing of China, which now seems to prefer more profitable dealings with the Burmese government. China is not the only country that has turned a deaf ear to the suffering of the Burmese people; many countries are now dealing commercially with Burma, and have no wish to look further than their own investments.

Unfortunately, little foreign press coverage is given to the injustices perpetrated by the present military regime; worst to suffer are the ethnic minorities of Burma, in whose areas whole villages are devastated by government anti-insurgent operations, and where local men are regularly forced to become porters for government troops.

Our party does not aim to represent only a single ethnic group or class. We are working for the rights of all the oppressed people of Burma. Our aim is democracy: freedom of elections, freedom to demonstrate, freedom of the press, freedom of trade, freedom to contact other countries.

Our most immediate concern is to gain the full support of the Burmese people and unite them in their struggle against the government, but at the same time we wish to request any foreigners who have sympathy for our cause, to take any available opportunity to voice opposition to the Burmese military regime in their own countries.
